

THE LIFE & TIMES
OF
JESUS THE CHRIST

A WALK THROUGH THE GOSPELS IN 50 WEEKS

COMPILED BY JASON HARDIN

READING THE GOSPELS

The four Gospels—Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John—tell us about the life of Jesus of Nazareth. And yet, they are not true biographies. They say little about Jesus’ family background and youth, and nothing about his physical appearance. They concentrate almost totally on the three years of Jesus’ public ministry, but even here they do not give enough information to reconstruct a complete history of those years. Rather, attention is focused on the Person of Jesus and his teachings, and all four Gospels climax with Jesus’ death and resurrection, and the events associated with them.

Matthew, Mark, and Luke are called the “Synoptic Gospels.” The term “Synoptic” means they view the life of Jesus from a “common perspective.” After introducing Jesus in different ways, depending on their purpose, they record the ministry of John the Baptist, the baptism and temptation of Jesus, his ministries in Galilee and in Judea, his final week in Jerusalem, his death and his resurrection. In the Synoptic record, Jesus characteristically refers to himself as “the Son of Man,” and he proclaims the “kingdom of God.”

Despite the similarities in the Synoptic accounts, these Gospels vary in what material they include and in the arrangement of specific events. Furthermore, each Gospel was written to emphasize certain aspects of Jesus’ Person and work. Matthew emphasizes that Jesus is the true Messiah and the object of Old Testament prophecy and expectation. Mark’s fast-moving account was written to provoke faith in Romans. Luke’s Gospel is addressed to a cultured Gentile and stresses Jesus’ concern for all kinds of people.

The Gospel of John differs from the Synoptics in a number of ways. It tells more about Jesus’ early ministry in Judea. John also records long thematic discourses by Jesus instead of the shorter sayings typical of the Synoptic accounts. In John, Jesus refers to himself as God’s Son and speaks of salvation as eternal life. More than the Synoptics, John includes theological reflection on the meaning of Jesus’ life and death.

3. Take a moment to think of what the Gospel writers told you this week. Why do you think they included what they did? How do the details from this week build on what we have read in previous weeks?
4. How does this section of Scripture show Jesus to be a real Savior for real people?
5. Are there any other sections of Scripture that elaborate on what you read this week?
6. What did you read this week that needs to "abide" in you so that you can have life—as a branch of the vine, bear fruit to God's glory, and so prove to be Jesus' disciple?
